Journalist Anatol Lieven here explores the complex ethnic and political relationship of Ukraine and Russia. Based on extensive interviews, Lieven provides a fascinating portrait of the political and cultural factors that sustain modern national identities in Russia and Ukraine and systematically compares the political cultures of these two historically similar, yet profoundly different nations. The text presents national identities as coexistent, and sometimes competing, elements of national politics. It also examines the critical role identity plays in the formation and maintenance of national states. The book focuses on Russia and Ukraine, where national identity is especially complex because of the devastating

This book is the first to analyse systematically the personal political factors which shape Ukrainians' international behaviour. Four leading specialists examine in turn the forces of foreign policy thinking and debate, policy making, the public debate and domestic political process. They analyse the dynamic domestic dynamics associated with new actors in the Russian foreign policy process. Examining the role played by politicians such as the President, Council and the legislature, by industries, groups and by emerging economic interests. The book has four main sections on the domestic foundations of Ukraine's economic and social context.
