The Fourth Industrial Revolution - Klaus Schwab - 2017
World-renowned economist Klaus Schwab, founder and executive chairman of the World Economic Forum, explains in an original way the phenomenon that he outlines in his signature text: the Fourth Industrial Revolution. The fourth industrial revolution is more significant and its ramifications more profound than any prior period of human history. As Schwab contends, it is already in development. Imagine “smart factories” in which global systems of manufacturing are coordinated virtually, or implantable mobile phones made of biosynthetic materials. The fourth industrial revolution, says Schwab, is more significant, and its ramifications more profound, than in any prior period of human history. He argues that a new age has begun in which people are becoming more powerful than machines and are driving this revolution and directing the major impacts expected on government, business, civil society, and individuals.

This is just the beginning: nanomaterials 200 times stronger than steel and a million times thinner than a strand of hair and the first transplant of a 3D printed liver are already in development. The Fourth Industrial Revolution offers bold ideas on how to harness these changes and shape a better future—one in which technology empowers people rather than replaces them; in which education, work, and governance are updated to reflect this new world; and in which we address critical challenges for the planet such as climate change, biodiversity, and sustainability.

Schwab also offers bold ideas on how to harness these changes and shape a better future—one in which technology empowers people rather than replaces them; in which education, work, and governance are updated to reflect this new world; and in which we address critical challenges for the planet such as climate change, biodiversity, and sustainability.

World Peace and Other 4th-Grade Achievements - John Hunter - 2014-02-04
"The Fourth Turning" is central to the groundbreaking work of William Strauss and Neil Howe, who have written The Fourth Turning: An American Prophecy and The Next America:陌生人's Guide to Utopia, The Next 100 Years, and The Fourth Turning, updating their 20-year forecasts for the future. This book is a primer on the ideas that Strauss, who passed away in 2013, and Howe developed in these earlier works, as well as in more than thirty years of teaching the World Peace Game, revealing the principles of successful collaboration that people of any age can apply. He offers not only a forward-thinking report from the frontlines of American education, but also a generous blueprint for a world that bonds toward cooperation rather than conflict. In this deeply hopeful book, a visionary educator shows us what the future of education can be. It is the World Peace Game devised by fourth-grade teacher Hunter. Hunter has spread the game around the world, created a network of teachers and scholars, and now finally builds a new world that people can actually create. He shows us how to turn ecological crises that still loom large in the world of adults... Hunter's optimism is infectious.

Publishers Weekly "Inspired, breath-of-fresh-air reading." — Kirkus Reviews "Hunter proves the value of 'slow teaching' in this important, fascinating, highly readable resource for educators and parents alike.

The characters in this book are fictional, but the underlying theory is based on the real historical phenomenon that a real revolution must go beyond filling in circles on a standardized test form. “For its 80th issue, the Jack Kirby Collector magazine presents a double-sized 50th anniversary examination of Kirby’s magnum opus! Africa, and Asia. They drew the three continents in countless shapes and sizes on their maps, but occasionally they hinted at the existence of a “fourth part of the world.” Old maps lead you to strange and unexpected places, and none does so more ineluctably than the subject of this book: the giant, beguiling Waldseemüller world map and diagrams, The Fourth Part of the World is the story of that map: the dazzling story of the geographical and intellectual journeys that have helped us decipher our world.

Shaping the Future of the Fourth Industrial Revolution - Klaus Schwab - 2018-11-06 World Economic Forum Founder and Executive Chairman Klaus Schwab offers a practical companion and field guide to his previous book, The Fourth Industrial Revolution. Today, technology is changing everything—how we relate to one another, the way we work, how our economies and governments function, and even what it means to be human. One need not look hard to see how the incredible advances in artificial intelligence, cryptocurrencies, biotechnologies, and the internet of things are transforming society in unprecedented ways. But the Fourth Industrial Revolution is just beginning, says Schwab. And at a time of such tremendous uncertainty and such rapid change, he argues it’s our actions as individuals and leaders that will determine the trajectory our future will take. We all have a responsibility— as citizens, businesses, and institutions - to work with the current progress, not against it, to build a future that is ethical, inclusive, sustainable and prosperous. Drawing on contributions from 200 top experts in fields ranging from machine learning to geosensing to nanotechnology, to data ethics, Schwab equips readers with the practical tools to leverage the technologies of the future to leave the world better, safer, and more resilient than we found it.

The Fourth Part of the World - Toby Lester - 2010-07-06 The Fourth Part of the World: A History of the Americas is an account of the meeting of two cultures, that of the indigenous peoples of the Americas and that of the Europeans who arrived and became its conquerors. In the summer of 1507, Martin Waldseemüller and Matthias Ringmann, two obscure scholars working in the mountains of eastern France, made it real. Columbus had died the year before convinced that he had sailed to Asia, but Waldseemüller and Ringmann, after reading about the Atlantic discoveries of Columbus’s contemporary Amerigo Vespucci, came to a startling conclusion: Vespucci had reached the fourth part of the world. To celebrate his achievement, Waldseemüller and Ringmann printed a huge map, for the first time showing the New World surrounded by water and distinct from Asia, and in Vespucci’s honor they gave this New World a name: America. The Fourth Part of the World is the story behind that map, a thrilling saga of geographical and intellectual exploration, full of outsize thinkers and voyages. Taking a kalediopic approach, Toby Lester traces the origins of our modern world, its narrative sweeps across continents and centuries, zeroing in on different portions of the map to reveal strands of ancient knowledge, feminist, biographical, religious, Christian missions, and more. In Lester’s telling the map comes alive: Marco Polo and the early 15th century brought the first West African slaves; Christopher Columbus and Amerigo Vespucci make their epic voyages of discovery; and finally, vitally, Nicholas Copernicus makes an appearance. The Fourth Part of the World is a panoramic, exhilarating read, a vivid journey back to the birth of our modern world’s geography and humanity’s worldview. One thousand copies of the map were printed, yet only one remains. Discovered accidentally in 1961 in the library of a German castle it was bought in 2003 for the unprecedented sum of $10 million by the Library of Congress, where it now appears permanent public display. Lavishly illustrated with rare maps and diagrams, The Fourth Part of the World is the story of that map: the dazzling story of the geographical and intellectual journeys that have helped us decipher our world.
